Mr. N. F. Marcy Has Been Appointed

N. F. Marcy has been appointed "Relief Investigator" by the Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare. He is succeeding Mr. Willis in this work in Sounding Creek and Collholme Municipalities. Mr.
Willis has been moved to an area further west.

Mr. Marcy states that it is the wish of the Department that no person in this area shall be actually in want, but also that only those actually in need,
receive relief.

He advises all persons, on relief to make a clear inventory of their assets and liabilities and to keep a clear record of all receipts or disposals of Chattels or cash.

While this may appear to create extra work or an "Effort" at the beginning, it is a sound business practice, and will avoid these people giving conflicting statements at different times. Those who are providing money for relief are demanding the exact facts as to its distribution.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that a League of Nations with modified covenants whose chief function would be to bring the nations closer together in frank mutual discussions of their problems around a table might achieve more than a League bulwarked by covenants which recent history has shown cannot be enforced. It is only when people get together in frank discussion that they lose instinctive distrust of one another.

Typewriters For Use On Air Lines
Have Been Perfected

Typewriters operated solely by radio impulses have been perfected and will soon be in operation on air lines, according to Daniel C. Roper, U.S. secretary of commerce.

The machines will enable pilots to have up-to-the-minute weather reports and enable passengers to have the latest market and news reports while in the air.

The new radio typewriters perfected by the air commerce bureau technicians and private manufacturers are capable of 60 words a minute.

The Washington-Nashville airway will be the first line to have the new machines in operation. The government will finance the installation making the machines available only to pilots for weather reports.

CHAPTER X.—Continued

There came the sound of sibilant gasps from those nearest. The shuffle of feet stopped on the instant. Starr and Michael, too, were stricken as still as though turned to stone, their arms about each other ready to swing into the dance. In the momentary hush it seemed that everyone else stood still, too, listening. But Stephanie Dale was neither hushed nor silent. In a dramatic, bitter moment she was hurling names at Starr. The kind of names of which only a jealous woman can think.

The whole gay party, their dancing feet stopped for the moment, stood aghast. Almost anything went in their mad set—but not scenes like this.

Stephanie was too angry to care. She had a great deal stored up to say and she was saying it all. Michael's face went from dark red to white. There was pleading in his eyes as he said:

"Stephanie, please!" She flared out at him, then. "I won't keep quiet! Why should I? I'm beginning to doubt whether your interest in this 'Play-girl'—she made the name anathema, while her eyes shot venom—"is purely professional, as you insist! How do I know you haven't been her lover, in common with half a dozen other men about town? Probably half the men here this minute? But you can't flaunt her in my face! If you dance with her, Michael, everything is finished between you and me!"

It was a merciless ultimatum. At Stephanie's savage onslaught Starr felt all the life suddenly dashed from her body. Now, undoubtedly, her greatest resentment was for Michael. . . . Though why should she care? He deserved—well, about anything. But surely not this public embarrassment. As she recovered herself slightly she turned to look at Michael.

She saw the battle he was waging with himself. He could not afford to quarrel with the girl he wanted to

PAINS ALL OVER HIS BODY

Kruschen Made Him Feel a New Man

Read the experience of this man who had rheumatism so badly that at times he was prevented from working.

"About 10 months ago," he writes, "I suffered terribly with rheumatism and neuritis. The pains were all over my body and some days I could not even get up from bed to go to work. A friend visited me and suggested that I should try Kruschen Salts. I did so, the result being that the pains seemed to gradually disappear. I have been going to work ever since without a break, thanks to Kruschen Salts, and I feel a new man."—A.R.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

marry, to whom it was generally accepted that he was engaged, and yet how many men would have accepted a rebuke like that in public? It was plain he meant to pay no attention to Stephanie, or anything she said. He held on to Starr defiantly.

Starr wriggled free from his arms. She drawled coolly:

"I'll save Michael the embarrassment of making a decision by sitting this one out. It's a little warm for dancing, anyway!"

She walked across the floor alone, toward the long, open windows that led to the high-up balcony that looked down over the city. More than one turned to watch her as the music poured on in the dreary, unmarveling at her courage. This was a new phase on the character of "Play-Girl," and there was a touch of reluctant admiration and sympathy even in the women's eyes.

This balcony at the Mayfair was high up over New York City. The panes outside its windows looked down so that one could imagine themselves on the crest of a hill, with the lights below twinkling like a sea of stars. Starr looked down on them, but somehow they were all blurred and wavery through a mist that welled to her eyes in spite of herself.

In the distance was caught a glimpse of the glory of the wide river, moon-drenched, turning the craft idling along it into silver boats. But in the light of day they would be dirty hulks, most of them, with no magic of moonlight to touch them. They would not be silver boats, they would be—That was how Starr felt—furnished.

She stood by the balcony rail, looking down at the lights and at the broad, wide expanse of the black and silver river. Music, muted a little, came from within. The dance was going on as though nothing had happened.

Starr was as surprised to find she was trembling as at the mist that clouded her vision. In spite of her brave front, things like this left their mark. They were bound to. She had not had sufficient experience in life in steeling herself.

She did not know how long she stood there. It made so little difference. Then the figure of a man suddenly appeared, just a dark blur against the wall of the tall building. That would be Lance, of course; he was never very far away. She was surprised that he had not already followed her out.

She moved slightly, glancing from the corner of her eyes. No, not Lance. The figure was too broad and athletic for Lance. Starr's heart gave a queer leap. Michael!

In the misty darkness the girl's lips twisted. A sibilant little laugh tinkled.

"Be careful, Michael—Hassan. I'm pointing out."

His voice came swiftly as he took another eager step nearer.

"I want to apologize for Stephanie, Starr. She had no right to say the things she did."

Starr said dully: "It doesn't matter, does it? She only said what everybody else thinks! If I remember, what you're rather intimidated yourself."

He spoke her name again, and in his tone was a world of hurt.

"Starr!"

"Yes, Michael."

Somehow it was easier to talk to him when the darkness obscured his arrogant young features. Perhaps it was easier for him, too, not to see the painted mask of "Play-Girl." All he saw was a tragic, white, indistinct smudge that was her face, and a larger white smudge, her dress, backed against the rail. His voice was strained.

"I want to apologize for myself, too, Starr. No man has the right to do to any woman, no matter what his preconcerted notions of her, what I did to you. I put you in an impossible position, and then blamed you because you lost your head. It's all my fault; whatever has happened tonight or any other time, is my fault. I didn't realize it until tonight, when I heard Stephanie call you those names, but I knew then, in a terrible moment, Starr, what I had done to you."

A strange tightness caught Starr Ellison's throat. Her barriers were down. She could have matched the supercilious Michael with mocking word for mocking word; she had no weapons with which to fight this new, humble Michael.

He had come closer now, was reaching for her hands with the big strong ones she knew so well. He was trying to look nearer into her face and the pools of her eyes that were hidden in the night blackness.

He said impetuously:

"I've been a mad fool, Starr! I began by being attracted that day I saw you on the street, pouring out your passionate little heart in just a few words that meant volumes to me. I thought I understood, then. And when I saw you for the third time in one day, it looked as if Fate was pointing you out to me, as the girl I had been looking for who could be molded like putty in my own hands, for my own too-worthwhile purpose, making you do exactly what I wanted you to do—for secret publicity's sake. We get so hardened in this game, as well as in the newspaper game. You know they say that a man will betray his own grandmother for the sake of a story. That was all I had in mind—a 'story'—one that should be sensational enough to help me line my own fool pockets. I thought I had sized up the situation. I was terribly wrong. Then you got beyond my control. As might have been expected, with a girl of your mentality. You were nobody's little dumbbell chorus girl. Which I should have known in the first place. I was so fatuously pleased with myself that I was even congratulating myself that I had found a woman with brains as well as beauty. . . ."

He paused, and in that momentary pause the silence was sibilant, the music from inside a mere softly purring obligato. His voice had a choke, as he went on.

Going Into Silk Industry

German Factory Workers Encouraged To Cultivate Silk Worms
Cultivation of silk worms by factory workers in their spare time is designed by the German government to be the beginning of a large industry. The state has been made at a small town in Westphalia where a site was contributed for a silk worm farm. The mulberry plantation consists of 15,000 plants. The space between the rows will be used for growing potatoes and other vegetables while the mulberry bushes are developing. The buildings required for the silk-worm plant will be constructed by miners and factory workers in spare time from materials furnished by the local mining company. The plantation is in a closely settled industrial district. 2178

A PERFECT TEAM

The quality of radio reception largely depends on your batteries. Ask for Eveready—and be sure!

GIVES BEST POSSIBLE RADIO RECEPTION

IT IS AIR CELL that has made battery radio so immensely popular these days. Air Cell—the modern battery—does away with the necessity of re-charging.

Air Cell maintains itself by simply breathing air. It sounds like a miracle and it is indeed one of Science's great achievements. Best of all, peak power level is maintained for 1000 playing hours. No dwindling of power as in other batteries.

And Laverbilt! Well—everyone knows it is the super "B" battery. It is built in tightly-packed layers and gives far longer life than the old-fashioned round-cell types. Thus you don't have to change your "B" battery as often as formerly.

This year, Eveready has eliminated the terminal posts and given you one socket—this means only one connection for each "B" battery. For perfect team work—Air Cell plus Laverbilt.

Some Observations On Export Possibilities Of Canadian Wheat

Harry Miller, Cereal Technologist, Cereal Division, Central Experimental Farm, has just returned from a four month visit in Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, where he made a study of milling and baking methods. The value of dough testing machines and chemical methods developed in Europe during the few years for the estimation of wheat quality were especially investigated. What he has learned will be helpful in testing the quality of new selections developed by the plant breeders of the Dominion Experimental Farms and other institutions. He also brought back some interesting observations on the export possibilities for Canadian wheat. While wheat from the Dominion is recognized in Britain and the European countries as the best wheat grown, the principal factor to be considered so far as England in particular is concerned, is price. England is one of the larger buyers of wheat from Canada, but flour milled in that country contains only an average from 40 to 50 per cent Canadian wheat, the remaining 50 to 60 per cent only being made up of low priced wheat from as many as 11 different countries. Judged by the standard of the Canadian loaf, the English bread is not as good.

A different situation, however, prevails in Scotland. There the loaf may be made of 100 per cent Canadian wheat and consequently the Scottish loaf is considered equal, if not better flavor, than that made in Canada. While the Scottish baker, like other bakers, is naturally concerned with the price factor, the general custom for generations over there has been to make bread by the process of long fermentation, which improves the flavour of the loaf. To follow this process the highest quality of wheat flour must be used and Canadian wheat therefore is sought. But the short fermentation method which is followed in most other modern countries, including Canada, is being adopted in Scotland and if it ultimately becomes general the result may have an effect on that excellent market for Canadian wheat.

Though France is a white-bread eating country little Canadian wheat is used, since its importation is greatly restricted; but if and when the market is opened fully in that country for Canada, the information obtained by Mr. Miller from his visit and studies in France, will be useful.

In Belgium the people eat white bread and about 50 per cent of Canadian wheat is used in the manufacture of Belgian bread flour. They are convinced that the wheat from Canada is as good a product as they can get anywhere. Precisely the same situation prevails in Holland. The law of that country requires that not less than 35 per cent of the wheat used for bread shall be home-grown and while this wheat is of soft variety, and in comparison with Canadian wheat the quality is considerably lower, yet the white loaf made in Holland is quite as good as the Canadian, judged by the general standards. There the short fermentation process is followed. There appears to be little immediate chance, however, of Canada increasing her exports of wheat to Holland, principally for the reason that the Netherlands made a trade agreement with the United States, which, on account of drought conditions in U.S., may be made from Canadian wheat. Night baking in Holland and Germany is not allowed and no bread must be delivered in Holland before 10 o'clock in the morning. In Germany rye bread is consumed to a great extent, this being made from the home-grown cereal. Most of the wheat flour used goes into the production of breakfast or morning rolls that are so well known to travelers on the continent. The larger breads are usually made from rye or wheat mixtures. Scarcely any Canadian wheat finds its way into Germany at the present time. The National Policy favours the use of rye bread and rye is grown abundantly in Germany and is a very productive crop.

Mr. Miller says that wherever he went he was shown marked courtesy and given the most ready co-operation. He found the kindness feeling for Canada and Canadians on every hand, and the work of the Dominion Experimental Farms that is being done not only in cereal, but in agriculture generally, is quite familiar among the people he met in the countries visited.

As a Life Insurance Policyholder

You Share in the Ownership of These Valuable Assets

Government Bonds First Mortgages Municipal Bonds
Industrial Securities Public Utility Bonds

YOUR savings in Life Insurance—which help to form the Assets of the company in which you are insured—not only protect you and your family but also make you a part owner of high-grade securities.

For example—as a Life Insurance policyholder, you share in the ownership of Government and Municipal bonds. These bonds provide for the construction of highways, railways, canals, schools, water and sewage systems, and other important public enterprises.

You likewise have a definite financial interest in Canadian industries, and in Canadian homes and farms.

The Life Insurance companies, which your enterprise and thrift have built up, acting on behalf of yourself and 3,500,000 other policyholders, invest the Assets you have entrusted to them. In making these investments, they exercise the utmost care to secure safety with a satisfactory yield.

Of the combined Assets in the Life Insurance Companies operating in Canada, the major part is invested in Government and Municipal bonds and debentures. Large amounts are also invested in first mortgages on carefully selected city, town and farm properties, and in loans to policyholders.

You can take satisfaction in the fact that Life Insurance companies in Canada have faithfully discharged their obligations. Even in periods of greatest financial stress, every obligation guaranteed by their policies has been fulfilled.
